

Luphonic H2

WINNER
TURNTABLE UNDER £5K

Luphonic, a German turntable brand founded by Thomas Luh in early 2020 with the goal of providing innovative hi-fi products at competitive price points. Luh's philosophy centres on creating turntables free from traditional design constraints, focusing instead on technical merit in materials selection. The H2 employs a sophisticated three-layer sandwich design incorporating Corian, known for its density and low resonance. The belt-driven H2 also features an innovative puck system for speed selection; it's magnetised and turning it over changes the turntable's speed.

“ Bass lines really moved, and the H2 enthusiastically conveyed the spirited drum play, which let the music move and flow.

Detailed and engaging

Our review highlights the H2's exceptional sound quality, providing a detailed and engaging listening experience. "The H2 had good inner detail and tonality on the guitar and saxophone," said Chris Frankland. He later added that the H2 was adept at "letting you hear the interplay between the musicians exceptionally well. The sound had great pace and agility. Bass lines really moved, and the H2 enthusiastically conveyed the spirited drum play, which let the music move and flow." He concluded by saying, "The H2 took it all in its stride and when I compared it with a couple of well-respected competitors at a similar price, the H2 more than held its own."
